Hendrick Rycken, the Progenitor of the Suydam Family in America

by J Howard 1832-1908. 1n Suydam (Author)

Annals of Newtown by John Riker, pp 319-326:
THE SUYDAM FAMILY.

It appears from Dutch annals, that there is a family bearing this name, of great antiquity in Holland or the Netherlands, where, as early as the eleventh century, they held large estates. But no evidence is as yet presented to favor the belief that the American family of Suydam is descended from the former, as the latter appear to owe their name to a custom in vogue among our Dutch fathers of assuming the title of the place in Europe whence the family had emigrated. Their first ancestor in this country was Hendrick Rycken, as his name is usually written, or, as his own signature is, "Heyndryck Rycken," a member of the Riker family, as stated on page 301, and who came hither in 1663. He was "from Suydam," our early records inform us ; but unless either Schiedam or Saardam be intended, (which is perhaps to be questioned,) I am in doubt as to its locality.

1. Hendrick Rycken was a smith, and located in the suburbs of New Amsterdam, at what was called the Smith's Fly, where he purchased a house and land in 1678. But being annoyed (as tradition in the Suydam family states) by the snakes which then infested the low lands in that vicinity, he removed to Flatbush, and with his wife, Ida Jacobs, united with the church there in April 1679 ; afterwards disposing of his city property to Dirck Van der Cliff, from whom Cliff street took its name. Rycken subsequently acquired a large estate at Flatbush and other places, and enjoyed a very respectable standing among men of that day. He d. in 1701. In his will he enjoins upon his wife a careful attention to the religious education of his children. These were Jacob<sup>2</sup>, Hendrick<sup>6</sup>, Ryck<sup>8</sup>, Ida, Gertrude, and Jane. It is a curious though well established fact, that, about the year 1710, the sons of Hendrick Rycken adopted the name of Suydam, and from these three persons all the Suydams in this [* The names of Jan and Johannes, though in fact the same, one being the Dutch and the other the Latin for John, were sometimes borne by brothers, as in the above case and several others which I have noticed.] and the adjoining states are descended.

2. Jacob Suydam, son of Hendrick<sup>1</sup> was b. in 1666, remained a farmer and smith at Flatbush, and lived where the old brewery stood, near that village. His wife was Seytie Jacobs. He was a person of intelligence and influence, and served as supervisor in 1706 and 1717. He d. in 1738, a. 71, having issue Jacob, Hendrick<sup>4</sup>, Johannes, Jan, Ryck, Cornelius<sup>3</sup>, Dow, Ida, Adriana, Gertrude, Isabella, Jane, and Seytie. Of these, Jacob left no issue. Jan had a son Jacob, who d. childless. Johannes settled at Bay Side, in Flushing, and d. in 1791, in advanced yrs. having by his wife Cornelia, issue, Seytie, m. Areson ; Jane, m. Eldred ; Ida, m. Thorne ; and Jacob, b. 1731, who fell heir to his father's farm, which is believed to be now possessed by his descendants. Rych removed to Somerset co. N. J. where he d. in 1798, a. 95, having by his wife Mary, issue, Peter, Jacobus, Abraham, Isaac, Eyck, Mary, m. Lawrence Van Cleef, and Ida who m. Peter Pumyea. Of whom Ryck d. unm. ; Isaac had issue Peter, John, and Ann ; Abraham had issue Joseph, Peter, Maria, and Ann ; Jacobus had issue John, Peter, Ryck, Joseph, Jacob, and Jane; and Peter had issue Ryck, Lawrence, Peter, Abraham, Ann, and Jane. Dow Suydam m. Sarah Vanderveer, and settled at Hempstead Swamp, in Newtown, on land obtained of his father in 1736, being now the estate of Rem Suydam, dec. He was the first of the name who located in this town. Prior to the Revolution, he sold his farm to his nephew John Suydam, and left Newtown, living in various parts of the Island during the war, and suffering on account of his whig principles. Having survived his consort 37 yrs. he d. at the house of his son John, in Jamaica, in 1794, a. 87. His ch. were Seytie, m. Garret Martence, Jacob, and John. Jacob m. Suydam House

Year Listed: 2014

Status: Endangered

City: Township of Piscataway

County: Middlesex

DESCRIPTION:

The Charles Suydam House, located on Hoe's Lane West in Piscataway Township, was originally constructed circa 1740 and added to over the next century and a half so today it reflects the Greek Revival period of architecture with late-nineteenth-century architectural decorative features of Italianate influence. Charles Suydam was a prosperous farmer and businessman who constructed the first mill on the Raritan River located above Raritan Landing circa 1750. Raritan Landing was a vital port in the mid-eighteenth and early-nineteenth centuries; Suydam's house is indicated on a map prepared by Cornelius C. Vermeule in his study of Raritan Landing published by the New Jersey Historical Society in the 1930s. Suydam was active in local government serving as surveyor of roads, as a constable, and as overseer of the poor. In 1772, he was also responsible for building a bridge over the lower Raritan. The property stayed in the Suydam family until the early-nineteenth century and was owned by a series of individuals until about 1885 when it and the surrounding farmland were purchased Charles R. Hoe. The Hoe family owned the property into the early-twentieth century and then again it was owned by a series of different owners until 2003 when it was purchased by Rutgers, the State University. Unfortunately, the building has been vacant for over ten years and its conditions are poor. It is unclear what the intent of Rutgers is with regard to the use of the property but the fear is that the longer the building remains vacant the rate of deterioration will accelerate providing the University justification for its demolition. PNJ encourages Rutgers to evaluate the history and significance of the Suydam House in the context of Piscataway and the region's development and to plan for future adaptive use of the property; it is set on a large expanse of land on a major thoroughfare in Piscataway and in close proximity to its main campuses and stadium.

Van Liew-Suydam 1875

Van Liew-Suydam Today

Standing atop the hill where South Middlebush and Blackwells Mills Roads meet, with a spectacular view of the Franklin countryside, fields and woods, of the Six Mile Run Valley, the sunsets may have been one reason Peter Van Liew settled on this site back in the 1700s, and why Joseph Suydam later built part of the house that is seen today. The newest and largest portion of the house was built in 1875. Although the most recent long-term owner of the house was named French, the house has been named after its two early owners, the Van Liews and the Suydams. The ornate woodworking on the porch and walls clearly demonstrates a perfect example of the architecture of a 19th-century Victorian farmhouse.

On September 27, 1988, the State of New Jersey sold the house to Franklin Township for $100. The house and property have been leased to the Meadows Foundation, which has restored the house exterior, interior, and barn.

History of the Farm

The Suydam family settled in Somerset County, New Jersey in 1713. For their first 50 years in the new world, they were residents of Brooklyn, New York after crossing the Atlantic from Holland on the ship the Rose Tree.

These Dutch settlers continued their tradition of farming by purchasing land and cultivating it with general field crops, fruits, vegetables and livestock. The Suydam family was busy supplying the local New Brunswick residents with fresh produce, milk and wool from the sheep they raised on the farm.

After a while, the Suydams began moving their produce and goods into New York City via boats and barges along the Raritan River at New Brunswick. Eventually, cattle and dairy cows became their main products and from the 1920s through the 1960s, Brown Swiss Dairy Cows became their main source of income. In 1960, Suydam Farms won an award for the highest production herd by the US Dairy industry.
